The market tradition in Riga is old and still running strong. Despite hurdles in the past, marketplaces are keeping old foodstuff customs alive and mixing them with contemporary (interdisciplinary) activities – all this with the focus on local and personal approach. In this tour, participants will have a chance to meet-and-greet with a selection of two important markets in Riga with rich histories and turbulent present. Every participant will learn of their past, the importance of markets today, what foodstuff we eat, sell and why, as well as a little introduction toward the future and the potential development of surrounding areas.
